Nox is an epitaph in the form of a book, a facsimile of a handmade book Anne Carson wrote and created after the death of her brother. The poem describes coming to terms with his loss through the lens of her translation of Poem 101 by Catullus "for his brother who died in the Troad."

Nox by Anne Carson - Goodreads

Through the course of Nox the words from the Catullus poem are translated and defined and interspersed with this are Anne Carson's thoughts, reflections, memories of her brother, along with photographic images, drawings and collages.

Nox is also the Roman goddess of night—perhaps the oldest of the Roman deities, the mother, by many accounts, of sleep, fate, and death—and in Carson's elegy Night becomes a kind of elusive...

The Unfolding | The New Yorker

Nox, an epitaph Carson created for her brother in 2000 and published in 2010, has been described as her most explicitly personal work. Carson is married to the artist Robert Currie, whom she met in Ann Arbor while teaching at the University of Michigan. She has described Currie as "my collaborator-husband person".

Anne Carson asked Danish poet Pejk Malinovski to read some parts of Nox in the Danish translation. Nox means 'night' in latin. The book is a foldout of letters, photography and poems, shaped as a dialogue with Roman poet Catullus, who wrote an epitaph for his brother, too. Nox is regarded as one of Carson's most outstanding works.
